312 LEGACY JORDANS LAUNCH

August | 2018

Don C, streetwear legend and longtime pal of Kanye West, has had his eyes on Jordans since he was a kid in Chicago watching the Bulls sink hoops in those legendary kicks. After several collaborations with Nike, the fashion designer finally had a chance to independently design a pair of Jordans, and he did it with a nod to his roots. Alma Creative Agency teamed up with Don to celebrate the launch of 312 Legacy Jordans this summer in Los Angeles at RSVP Gallery, the store co-created by Don himself and Virgil Abloh.

We sat down with Don C over expertly crafted Remy Martin 1738 cocktails where the designer recalled his early days in the fashion business when he was refused entry at Paris Fashion Week. Nowadays he sits in the front row along with other A-Listers. It's been a long road, but Don C hasn't forgotten where it all started: Chi-Town. Don C fondly named the hybrid sneaker after Chicago's famous dialing code, 312.

Alma and Don C welcomed guests, including Tracey Mills, Nico from Rokit, IBN Jasper, and HXLT, to get a first look at the sneaker. Friends and family of the designer munched on Chicago-style hot dogs and fried chicken and waffles, while grooving to the beats of favorite Windy City talents.

For more of Don C and his sneakers, stop by RSVP Gallery (905 S Hill Street, LA & 1753 N Damen, Chicago) or pop over to his website, JustDon.
